

About The Founder Of Immortal Opulence Skin Cream. Richard Fanelli

It all started in the early to mid 1980's when I attended Xavier High School and was part of Brother Houlihan's Introductory To Physical Science Class (aka-IPS) It was so interesting working in lab set-ups and learning how certain compounds react with each other.

While attending Central Ct State University, it was all about psychology and getting a multi-faceted grip on human understanding.

Along the way, I attended and graduated from the Barbizon School Of Modeling in West Hartford, Ct. I began modeling men's suits and colognes in various high end department stores. I recall having many interesting conversations with the cosmetic specialists behind the cosmetic counter. They would show me the different skin creams priced at $150 dollars or more and I would read the labels and wonder why I couldn't pronounce most if not all the ingredients.

This annoyed me to some degree because I wondered...how could these chemicals be good for your face. I was told it's all about label buying...but that didn't make any sense. I was still learning; yet, developing a strong interest in the holistic field.

My interest in skincare kicked into high gear when I began visiting and corresponding with my Uncle who was head of a major Hospital in Poland and my 3 Cousins whom are all medical Doctors in Poland. Poland is so much more open minded about treatments when it comes to the human body. I visit them regularly and over the years, they have explained the many different therapies they have used to help their patients. It's the way it should be; where a doctor can utilize anything they feel can help someone without always being under thumb by controlling agencies. I always asked so many questions especially about the ageing body.

It was fascinating to me to learn, everything begins with a cell. This concept inspired me to learn about the "cell". The more I researched the more I had become immersed in the subject. I realized ageing is a complex "network of exchanges" between cells. Skincare at this point became my absolute passion because your skin is the first thing anyone sees during the process of ageing.

Can ageing be stopped? Slowed down? And if so how?

I became obsessed with how cells and skin care can have a symbiotic relationship if you introduce the right compounds; and there lay the challenge of my lifetime and nothing was going to stop me.

I knew many skin care products contain very dangerous ingredients so I set out to create something unique and unusual which will positively affect someone's life.

Many of us have heard the saying: "God heals his creation with his creation".

The labor of love was finding these creations and figuring out, with the help of a retired chemist and feedback from my family of European doctors, how to formulate these compounds with pin point accuracy to develop a skin cream, which would be a true anomaly. The passion and relentless devotion to Immortal Opulence has not stopped and never will. Wrinkles in both men and women are NOT an option and these chemical infested commercial products are also NOT your "only" option as of now!

What sets Immortal Opulence apart in the holistic field is the high quality ingredients obtained from remote areas of the world. Many products do actually use "organic" ingredients which is a testament to their understanding of the need to eat and absorb clean products.

The only problem is the word "organic" can sometimes be a broad term. For example: many organic products used to make oils or compounds for skin care are grown on huge farms and although "organic" they may be similar in power to other commercially grown products.

I knew to overcome the hurdle of creating a "typical product", many of our ingredients must contain "wild grown" compounds found in remote areas of the globe. Wild grown plants must develop powerful mechanisms to survive intense climate changes, defeat insects, and compete with other plants for survival. This makes the compounds in them much more powerful and gives the skin cells an abundance of power so your skin has something substantial to work with in starting the rejuvenation process.

So, this is what is found in Immortal Opulence skin cream.

I think Brother Houlihan would be happy to know he ignited the spark which led me to this journey, of wanting to positively impact a person's life by helping them look better, feel better and have the joy and confidence which comes with that.

Immortal Opulence is starting to become the "go to" product for skin care in New England. I believe this is due to the incredible response we get from our hundreds of clients. When they share Immortal Opulence with friends or a loved one, we know we have done right by our clients and they are to be respected and cherished.

Experience the life changing results of a real and powerful skin cream which goes way beyond skin deep.
